

One (1) PhD Student Position

[Ref # ORZ-0799]

The research group of Christos DELIDAKIS, under the European Program HORIZON-WIDERA-2023-ACCESS-02/ Project 101159925 entitled Building integrative single-cell omics capacities using invertebrate tumour models relevant to human disease – SCENTINEL, invites applications for one (1) motivated PhD student to assist with the implementation of the scientific and networking aspects of the project.

About the lab

The Delidakis lab studies cell specification, both normal and pathological, in the context of transcriptional networks and cell signaling in Drosophila. We are affiliated with the Biology Department of the University of Crete, where the successful candidate will be enrolled for his/her PhD programme. S/he will further be assisted in applying for personal fellowships during this time, visit partners labs and present at international conferences.

About the project:

The present project uses cutting edge single-cell genomic approaches to characterize a neural cancer model and its microenvironment in adult Drosophila hosts. This will be complemented by microsurgical manipulations, advanced imaging and ex vivo culture. Generation and analysis of cancer models in Drosophila/ work package 3 (Deliverable 3.1)/ work package 4 (Deliverable 4.2, 4.3).

Job Description:

The successful candidate will explore the role of metabolic reprogramming in tumor progression. Specifically, the transcriptional and cell signalling regulation that lead to metabolic reprogramming, the interactions of metabolically reprogrammed tumor cells with other tumor subpopulations and tissue crosstalk with host organs. Additionally, s/he will generate new antibodies for tumor subtype-specific markers that are currently unavailable.
